In the past, there were many people who believed that there were ghosts everywhere in winter, and they thought that the bad things always came with the long dark winter nights. If they wore scary costumes, those ghosts would not recognize them. Today, people celebrate Halloween by dressing up in scary outfits and masks and have parties where they eat toffee apples and a wide variety of sweets and biscuits. They also leave bowls of food outside their house for those ghosts because they believe this will stop them from trying to get in their house. Moreover, they put candles inside the lanterns made from pumpkins and leave them outside to frighten away ghosts.

You can't always choose your room, but you can choose the things inside it. Because of that, your bedroom says a lot about your personality.

And we're not only talking about your favorite hobbies or your taste in music and books. Of course, a guitar behind the door or sci-fi stories in your bookcase give people information about you, but a careful look at your bedroom can teach them a lot more than that. The colors in your room, for example, are very interesting. Does your room have bright colors on the walls, curtains, a rug or a comforter? Then you probably love trying new things. People with pale walls are often friendly and talkative, but people with dark walls don't like meeting new people. Black and white is a popular choice for people with strong opinions.

The pictures on your walls say a lot, too. Generous people like decorating their rooms with photos of their friends and family, but if your own face is in every picture or you have more than one mirror, watch out! This shows that you are probably a little selfish. So, before you invite your friends into your bedroom, think carefully what message your bedroom will give them about you.

Buy Nothing Day

Buy Nothing Day started in 1993 and is now an international event that takes place in more than 55 countries. It is a simple idea to challenge consumer culture and ask people to stop shopping for 24 hours.

Buy Nothing Day encourages people to think about what they buy and the possible effects the product may have on the environment and developing countries. For example, if you buy a new pair of trainers, do you know where they were made and if the people who made them are treated well by the company?

According to the organizers of Buy Nothing Day, shopping itself isn't harmful but what we buy can be. They claim that in the rich western countries 20% of the world population consume 80% of the earth's natural resources. They want consumers to think more about what they buy and to ask themselves some questions before buying anything new. Here are some of the questions to put on your checklist:

- ✓ Do I need it?
- ✓ How many do I already have?
- ✓ Will I use it a lot?
- ✓ Will it last a long time?
